COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 1 (Special)—Women depositors in Illinois banks are opening 45 per cent of the new accounts in the State and their balances are usually about double those of men, Amy R. Hyde, advertising manager for the Union Bank of Chicago told the Financial Advertisers' Association at today's session of their tenth annual convention. She added that it is not only the wife of the wage earner who saves, but rich women as well, all classes being included. "One afternoon, at the bank," she said, "looking out on the street we saw an unkempt, ragged old woman pilking up sticks and I remarked, how pitiful.' Later we found she had an account with the Union Bank of Chicago—and it was an account of four figures. for law and our American institu-tions have been threatened.

The rent laws now in force in New York City prohibit the eviction of a tenant except for one of four reasons, Samuel Rosenman, one of the authors of the law, explained. The four exceptions are: First, if the landlora wants the house for himself; second, if the tenant proves objectionable; third, if the building is to be torn down, and fourth, if the building is to be torn down, and fourth, if the building is to be made into a cooperative apartment house.

The rent laws also provide that a tenant may at any time have his rent fixed by court and also that a landlord cannot increase the rental charges unless he proves in court that a increased financial return on his property is equitable.

Mr. Rosenman declared he had no doubt that the present laws would be extended for another two years. He said, however, that the apartment house owners were engaged in a strong, organized campaign in oppo-ation.

Extension Is Possible Extension is Possible
Mr. Fosenman said it was "a practical certainty" that the 63 representatives of the five boroughs of New York City in the Legislature would vote for extension. Only 13 more votes are needed for the necessary majority. These, Mr. Rosenman said, will be forthcoming from the upstate districts as soon as sufficient "moral pressure" is brought to bear upon those members who naturally are less familiar with rental problems here than their colleagues from New York.

Locarno Rejoices at Great Event-Success Due to Concerted Efforts

LOCARNO, Swit., Oct. 16 (A)-The Treaty of Locarno, embodying the security pact between the western European powers, was formally initialed by the powers' delegates late this afternoon

The conference also adopted the arbitration treaties bearing on Germany's eastern frontiers. It was dequestionnaires to present at the hearings before the New York State agreements in all the European capitals next Tuesday morning.

By Special Cable LOCARNO, Swit., Oct. 16-The Poreign Ministers of Great Britain, France, Germany, Belgium and Italy, at a conference this evening, will sign the western security pact. Dr. Eduard Benès and Count Skrzynski at the same time will do the same for the treaties of their respective countries treaties of their respective countries with Germany. Austen Chamberlain remarked this morning that "this is the happiest birthday of my life," as he stood on the terrace of the Palace Hotel to receive a deputation. The Mayor and citizens of Locarno, accompanied by a band playing "God Save the King," came to offer him congratulations. Poland, It Is Urged, Must Draw Closer to Germany and to Soviet Russia

PARIS, Oct. 16 (P)-The Council of Ministers today gave unanimous approval to France's adherence to the Security Pact drawn up at Locarno.

By SISLEY HUDDLESTON

By Special Cable PARIS, Oct. 16-The agreement on the pact of Locarno, which was generally foreseen before the conference began, is nevertheless arousing considerable enthusiasm. The mere letter of the document, said a French diplomatist to the correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor, is not in itself the most important thing. The precise provisions are secondary, to the change of heart. What matters is that a new era is inaugurated by the rapprochement between France and Germany. They meet on an equal footing, they voluntarily put their signature to the peace pact, and even though their friendship is not real today it will tend to become so by reason of the fact of their formal association. This means that peace is assured during the present generation, and although it is true the next generation will probably have forgotten the lessons of the Great War there will be a steady development of civilization in the framework of international law. Thus a present is consequent tional law. Thus a prospect is opened by an event much greater than the event itself. The moment France and Germany join hands a decisive example is set for the rest of Europe.

French Hegemony Lost

Obviously the pact implies an entire regrouping of European nations. French hegemony is lost. Czecho-slovakia, which has Hamburg for a port, may turn its regards toward Berlin. Poland sees the situation changing and realizes that in spite of all controversy regarding the French right to traverse Germany if Poland is attacked the special as-sociation of the two countries is disthe Locarno security conference with its momentous promise of European peace was able to displace the Prince of Wales from the leading news and editorial columns of the morning papers.

Industrial Stage Set for Profit. Leaders Tell Cotton Convention

American industry is today launched upon an era of stable and long-enduring prosperity, and the continuance of these improving conditions will depend fundamentally upon a sound world peace and the further elimination of waste in production. General Motors Cars have high resale value

More than ever the public asks before buying a car: "Is it an established make? Is the organization behind it permanent? Has it intrinsic value? Will parts and service be readily available? Will it therefore have high resale value?"

Each General Motors car and truck is an established product. Each has behind it the resources of the whole General Motors organization. Each has parts, accessories and equipment made largely by General Motors and sold and serviced everywhere. Each has enjoyed the economies of large scale production and the benefits of General Motors' engineering and research.

In saying that the new series of General Motors cars represent "greatest values in automobile history" we have in mind their future "used car" value as well.

Cuyler's Batting Takes Title From Washington in Seventh Game

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 16 (Special)—The World Series of 1925 is over at last and the Pittsburgh Nationals today stand out as the champions of Washington Americans in the seventh and deciding game of the series, here, terday 9 to 7. And what a game i yasterday 9 to 7. And what a game it was! It can be said with certainty that there was never a game like it before and it is doubtful if there will ever be another to compare with it. Thousands of rain-soaked fans stayed through 3½ long innings to cheer their team on to as great and glorious a victory as a club ever attained in any World Series, or in any baseball game for that matter.

The thousands of spectators are to-lay traveling back to their respective places in the daily life of the Nation with the memory of that great two-base hit off Cuyler's bat in the eighth inning with the bases full, two out and the score tied. It stands out as the biggest thing in the series for it won the title for the National League thampions after poor starts in both the last game and the whole series. Cuyler, the player who was struck out three times by Johnson in the first game he pitched, twice in the second game and once in an earlier inning of the last game, made the hit that won the series.

Cloudy All Day

Cloudy All Day

the last game, made the hit that won the series.

Cloudy All Day

The day was cloudy from the time fans took their first glances out of their bedroom windows early in the morning. All day the weather looked uncertain and it appeared as though rain would again interfere with the deciding game being played. At 1:45, about the time that it began to rain Wednesday, it again started, yesterday, with such force that fans expected to two another postponement. But it lasted only about five minutes and then let up. It still remained cloudy and thank and in the seventh inning the rain began again in torrents and settled clown finally to a steady drizzle which kept up until the last man was out. It was so dark at times that it was difficult to distinguish the outhelders. Towels to wipe the bats with and saw fust for the pitcher's box were in corstant evidence.

With the score 7—6 in favor of Washington, P. Ettsburgh came to bat in the eighth inning with things looking rather tuil for the National League champiems. Wright and Mc-Innis were easy outs and the spectators began to chink it was all over. Smith, the third man up, doubled and with the tying rum on second, Bigbee was sent in to hit for Kremer and he doubled, scoring Smith. Moore received a base op talls and Carey made first and advanced each runner when Peckinpaugh made his eighth error of the series, a record for the World Scries that will probably last for some first and advanced each runner when Peckinpaugh made his eighth error of the series, a record for the World Scries that will probably last for some first and advanced each runner when Peckinpaugh made his eighth error of the series, a record for the World Scries that will probably last for some firm to come. With three men on bases and the score a tie, Johnson had three balls and the score and Moore. The crowd simply roared with enthusiasm and the stands rocked. It was a fitting dimax to one of the most exciting games in the history of baseball.

Washington secured an early lead in the first inning secrin

SIDELINES. Pittsburgh Scores Again
Pittsburgh scored again in the fifth inning when Carey doubled and Cuyler followed with a double. In the seventh inning, the rain started to come down in good fashion. So the Pittsburgh hitters started also. Moore made second on Peckimpaugh's seventh error of the series and scored on Carey's double, his third of the game.
The next two men were easy outs and then Traynor, who has been a hard man for Johnson all the series, made his triple and was out trying to get home. It was Traynor's second triple of the series, in fact he made the only triples of the series.
With the score tied at 6 all, Peckinpaugh hit a home-run in the first half of the eighth. And then followed that memorable eighth inning which fans

ler followed with a double. In the reventh inning, the rain started to come down in good fashion. So the Pittsburgh hitters started also. Moore made second on Peckimpaugh's seventh error of the series and scored on Carey's double, his third of the game. The next two men were easy outs and then Traynor, who has been a hard man for Johnson all the series, made his triple and was out trying to get home. It was Traynor's second triple of the series, in fact he made the only triples of the series.

With the score tied at 6 all, Peckinpaugh hit a home-run in the first half of the eighth. And-then followed that memorable eighth inning which fans will never forget and which will never fail to hold a large place in baseball history.

What won the series for Pittsburgh is a question that fans who witnessed each game can answer most readily. It was the vinning enthusiasm of the club, an enthusiasm that surpassed even that of the great Washington team. Determination, such as two contending teams in a World Series have seldom displayed at one time, has marked the entire seven games.

Johnson Appreciated

Baseball followers appreciate the efforts of Johnson to win his third victory of the series, and thus tie the World Series record for a pitcher. They also appreciate the indomitable playing enthusiasm of the Washington club, which never gave up until the last man was out in the last sinning. One club or the other had to win and Pittsburgh's display of enthusiasm of the Washington club, which never gave up until the last man was out in the last inning. One club or the other had to win and Pittsburgh's display of enthusiasm plus the remarkable fielding performances of Traynor and Wright and the hitting and base running of Carey, won the day for the Nashington.

When the last out was made in the game, Pittsburgh fans gave out cheer upon cheer, which did not fade out until the last spectator had left the field. As one Pittsburgh fan put it, "Even the rain couldn't keep us from winning."

Seven doubles, one triple and a home run were included in the hits of the game, which readily shows the terrific hitting which marked the final contest. For those who had waited throughout the preceeding six games for Pittsburgh's offensive to begin in carnest there was plenty of action. Of the seven doubles made, six of them were by Pittsburgh players. Carey hit three doubles' in addition to a single and scored three runs. Cuyler had two doubles to his credit. Schaefer's followers here anticipate a close contest with the Belgian. The title defender, they say, will need every bit of the record-breaking skill he exhibited in the last annual tournament when he ran 400 from spot to win a game from Erich Hagenlacher of Germany, and ran 296 unfinished against Hoppe in the final battle. In that series, Schaefer displayed a grand average of 57.14 points in 35 innings, while Horemans displayed 45.2 points in 39 innings.

For five years Horemans has been striving for the title. This is his first chance to win it outside of tournament competition. Horemans had failed to prove a great tourney player, up to the last campaign when he finished second, losing only to Schaefer, 400 to 161. In that series Horemans

Too much credit cannot be given to the great Walter P. Johnson, veteran pitcher of the Washington club, who lost his third attempt in the series after winning his first two. It was a hard game to lose, and it is reasonable to believe that with better weather Johnson might have again been returned victor. Although beaten in his attempt to the the World Series record by winning three games in one series, Johnson has increased in popularity with the fans. He will always be admired by American sport followers as one of those players who can be classed with Christy Mathewson, who has set such a splendid example to the youths of the nation in sportsmanship. Johnson is just as great in defeat as in victory.

Rain failed in its last attempt to pro-long further a prolonged World Series, yesterday. It is just as well that the game was played, for rain or no rain, nothing better than yesterday's contest could be asked for.

Aldridge who twice beat the Senators in the series started yesterday by allowing two hits and giving two bases on balls in the first inning. Pitchers cannot always be expected to star any more than fielders.

Washington made a home run in every game in the World Series of 1925. Peck-inpaugh's homer in the final game was the eighth one for the club. Of the 12 home runs in the series only two were made with men on bases. Pittsburgh is the ninth National League club to win the World Series in a total of 22.

One of the records to fall in the series of 1925 was the total-base record for Joseph Harris, His double in the last game made his total bases reach 22, which beat the record of 21 set last year by Goslin, his team-mate.

William F. Knebelkamp, owner of the Louisville Club of the American Association, plans to manage his own team next year in place of Joseph McCarthy, who has quit to manage the Chicago Nationals. During 1926 Knebelkamp plans to coach some member of his team for Seldom, if ever before, have two pitchers faced each other in a World Series with two victories to the credit of each and the final game giving the winner a chance to join the ranks of Christy Mathewson, Stanley Coveleskie, J. W. Coombs and C. B. Adams as the only pitchers winning three games in one World Series as was the case with Johnson and Aldridge yesterday, Aldridge retired early in the first game, leaving the Senators' veteran to add his name to the list but he was unable to accomplish his ambition, as he lost the game.

Striking out Cuyler and Bernhardt on six successive balls in the first inning yesterday was one more sample of Johnson's ability as a pitcher.

No player ever deserved his unconson's ability as a pitcher.

No player ever deserved his unconditional release more than Harry B. Hooper, star outfielder of the Chicago White Sox. He has played major-league baseball 17 years and has been one of the most unassuming players of all time. He started his major-league career with the Boston Americans, going from there to the Chicago White Sox in 1921. With T. E. Speaker, manager and centerfielder of the Cleveland Americans, and Goorge H. Lewis, he made up the Red Sox outfields of all times and with his retirement. Speaker will be the only one of the trio in major-league circles next year.

Eastern Colleges Facing Hard Games

Three Intersectional Football Contests of More Than Passing Importance

Several interesting developments re expected as the result of some of the college football games which are scheduled to take place tomorrow not only in the eastern part of the counintersectional matches of more than heavy-scoring teams of the east, are in the west for the purpose of meeting Ohio State University at Columbus, O., and Indiana University at Indianapolis, Ind. The first-mentioned game will bring two powerful elevens to-gether and should give a rough line on the relative strength of the Westrn Conference elevens as compared the stronger eastern colleges. The Syracuse-Indiana game not be so important as Indiana is rated below championship class this fall having lost its only Conference game to date to University of Michi-game to date to University of Michigan by a score of 63 to 0.

West Point vs. Notre Dame
In the east the intersectional game which will attract the most attention brings Notre Dame against the United States Military Academy and as Cooach K. K. Rockne is having to build up an entirely new Notre Dame eleven this fall, the Cadets expect to make a better showing than they did last year when the westerners won 13 to 7. The Army appears fully as strong if not stronger than at this time last year and the Cadets expect a victory with Coach Rockne quoted as saying that he expects his team to be defeated.

For the "Big Three" it is going to be a very interesting day as Yale will be facing Pennsylvania in a battle which should be the hardest in the east. Last year these were two of the three teams that went through the eastern season that the proves his sability.

Crowd Estimated at 30,000-Indian Radiocast Disturbs With War Dance Tunes

A record-breaking crowd attended the fifth annual Boston Radio Exposition yesterday,, even as the gav before, numbering some 30,-000, and said to be the largest attendance for an indoor affair ever known in the history of Boston. As a radio show attendance figure, it has only been outdone by New York and Chicago, and then by but a narrow margin. These figures are a definite tribute to the management of Sheldon Fairbanks, "impresario" of the

Anyone casually dropping into Mechanics Building yesterday and observing the people thronging their way about the spacious hall and exhibits would have been impressed with the high type of audience this show is drawing. They were decidedly of the buying type, and this is substantiated by the reports of exhibitors who stated that they have never before closed a show day with s many orders.

One of the starring events of the day before was the arrival of a group of 10 Arapahoe Indians from vation, led by Chief Black Horse, a Wind River Government Reseruniversity graduate. The chief made a short talk to the microphone at the temporary WEEI studio after which he sang war dance music. And when an Indian sings a war dance it is sufficient cause for calling in all the effort to find out what has gone wrong with the receiver. The chief certainly disturbed the atmosphere yesterday and many an audio transformer must have given a sigh of re-lief when it was over after trying to pass the weird frequencies put out this feathered friend. Lieut.-Comdr. Eugene MacDonald. just back from the Arctic and looking very natty in his naval uniform, was a visitor to the show. He told the writer he was certainly glad to get back although the experience one of those things that money could not buy. He was accompanied by Paul Klugh, president of the National Association of Broadcasters. Mr. Klugh said that his group would be present in force at the Hoover Conference to be held Nov. 9 in Washington and that the day preceding the opening of the conference a business meeting would be held during which the affairs to be taken up would be organized so that they could be presented in a definite, tangible form the next day.

During the evening the writer stopped at the Boston Post booth to talk with Henry Lane, the technical expert for that paper. Then from a clear sky in drifted Sam Curtis, the new technical man for the Boston American, a real radio man and old time operator. In a few minutes Frank Gage of the Transcript came The whole affair was absolutely inexpected and a fine pow-wow was held by all the radio scribes. The meeting only needed the Traveler and Globe men to make it a complete Bos-

One of the most interesting outgrowths of the whole conversation was the unanimous opinion of those present that there had been far too much "trick" apparatus on the market, that had relatively little merit and that yet was boomed to the skies by its manufacturers, many of them taking their products quite seriously.

The group agreed to discussed to the work of the manufacturers and the skies of the manufacturers and the skies of the manufacturers and to the skies of the manufacturers and the skies of the manufacturers and the skies of the manufacturers and the skies of the skies present that there had been far too agreed to circumvent as that some products deserved a definite exposé. If the writers throughout the country will take this attitude it will certainly help toward stabilizing the radio industry. V. D. H.

Dealer Not Responsible If Set Does Not Work Due to Location, Is Finding

MONTREAL, Oct. 14 (Special Corespondence) - Atmospheric conditions apart from their effect the judge, entered into the determination of a legal decision in the Superior Court here recently. The plaintiff sued for recovery purchase price of a radio set, bought inder a warrant, which he claimed had not functioned. The defendents claimed a similar radio installed in another part of the city at the same time had worked perfectly: that plaintiff's radio was mechanically efficient, and its failure to function due to poor reception which, in turn, was due to atmospheric conditions about the residence of plaintiff. The judge in dismissing the action said that from the proof before him he could only attribute the negative results of the experiments made in the residence of the plaintiff to the peculiar atmospheric conditions of the locality, or to other causes diffiwhich the radio could not be held responsible. Now the plaintiff is said to be considering asking a court injunction restraining static from interfering with his radio.

Knabe-Ampico Piano

The final word in reproducing the works of the master musicians.

It is to those who attend concerts and recitals that the Ampico offers the keenest enjoyment. Always ready to re-enact the playing of the great pianists, it repeats the memorable pleasures of the concert hall in the home.

Those whose critical taste has been cultivated through frequent attendance at musical events appreciate the faultless beauty of Ampico recordings through the glorious Knabe.

Household Arts, Crafts and Decoration

A Rare Specimen of Indo-Persian Painted Calico

Special Correspondence HE Metropolitan Museum of Art has put on exhibition in its gala magnificent fabric painting of large dimensions and very elaborate design, as the accompanying picture shows. This Indo-Persian painted hanging dates from the seventeenth century and it is probable that this is the type of painted cottons from India to which the Spanish gave the of Aug. 30, 1665;

my Lady Mordaunt's at Ashted, parently from the hand of the same where was a roome hung with Pintado, full of figures greate and small, prettily representing sundry trades and occupations of the Interest of the same was a roome hung with Pintado and parently from the hand of the same was small production. When the same was small production and the same was small production and the same was small production. dians with their habits."

This important piece was pre-sented to the museum in 1920 by Albert Blum. Only three other fabric paintings of the same type are known to exist in museum collections. One of these is in the Brooklyn Museum of Arts and Sciences, a second in the Victoria and Albert Museum in London, and the third in the Museum of the Union of Decorative Arts in Paris.

Three Techniques

While these cottons are commonly known as painted or printed, in reality they are the product of a special technique and even of two or three different techniques—combining brush work with wood block patterns and with the special proc-ess known as "resist." The last mentioned much resembles Javanese Batik, but differs sufficiently to be worth a bit of description.

The craftsman begins by stenciling the desired pattern on the cloth.

Ing the desired pattern on the cloth, which has received a special preparation in order to be ready to receive and fix the dye.

The stencil is made by the process of "pouncing" or sifting powdered charcoal upon a perforated design drawn upon parchment-like paper. The outline of the design thus transferred to the cloth is next painted in with a fine brush, after which the with a fine brush, after which the entire surface of the cloth, except such parts of the pattern as are reserved for a special color, is covered with wax. The cloth is then placed in the dye and receives the first color, the wax preventing the rest of the cloth from being stained. Next the wax is removed by boiling, after which a fresh coat of wax is carefully added, again covering the whole surface (including the portion just dyed) except those areas which are to receive the second color.

In describing this elaborate and tedious process, Miss Frances Morris, an authority on textiles, says:
"This waxing, boiling, bleaching and rewaxing continues for each color until the piece is finished, and when an exceptionally fine piece is made where the pattern is the same on both sides of the cloth, the entire surface, back and front, has to be subjected to this difficult process for each color that appears in the fin-ished fabric."

features. Even more interesting are other groups, such as those representing persons taking the sir in a splendid palanquin.

The elaborate frame is also very leries for the display of textiles interesting, being architectural in character, as if meant to suggest the cross-section of a palace placed amid splendid pleasure grounds. The Diminutive Foreigner

A very curious feature of the design is the variation in size between the Indian figures and those which name of Pintado, and to which refer- are evidently meant for Europeans. ence is made in Sir John Evelyn's. This same variation, by the way, is Diary, where we read under the date also found in the London specimen Woodcott, when I supp'd at already referred to, which is ap-

In the museum piece, a figure of what appears to be no less a personage than his Majesty, Charles I—or is it perhaps his favorite, Prince Thomas Francis, Duke of Savoy whose consecution protects in the contract of th Savoy, whose equestrian portrait by Vandyke so closely resembles that of the King?—is relegated to two small panels in the lower left-hand corner, where his Majesty sits with his royal back turned to the charms of a group of nautch girls, who are given much more prominence in the composition than is accorded to his Royal Highness.

> The fact that foreigners are por-trayed need not surprise us, since it is a well-known fact that there were numerous portraits of Englishmen in India as early as 1616. Moreover, there were literally hundreds of places where these beautiful and artistic fabrics were produced by skilled Indian craftsmen during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. It is usually difficult to tell the exact locale where any given specimen originated, so that textile authorities designate them as Indo-Persian, or merely describe them as "Indian work produced under Persian in-

The machine machine.

All machinery requires greasing at times to insure the smooth running of the moving parts and to lessen friction. To be properly lubricated, in fact, a machine must have a film of grease constantly between the moving parts. It will be found that the machine is often finally discarded as a fraud and a waste of money.

Now it is safe to say that in nine cases out of ten the fault lies in lack of understanding on the part of the user rather than in the machine tself. There are black sheep among labor-saving appliances, but they are not many, and all the discarded appliances of which one hears are not included among them.

Right Use and Cleanliness

Long and faithful service on the part of any particular household machine depends on several things. who does not trouble to use an appliance in the right way or to take an intelligent interest in its mechanism who quickly complains of the results.

moving parts. It will be found that some appliances are equipped with grease cups, others with oil cups— generally with the directions, "oil here" or "grease here," marked near the opening.

Unless special directions are supplied with the machine, vaseline is the most satisfactory variety of grease. It is a simple matter to unscrew the cap and fill the grease cup, using a knife to pack in the grease. Where the use of oil is indicated, pliances great care must be taken of the connecting cord and plugs. The cord contains the minute cop-per cables which conduct the current from the circuit to the appliance, and any twisting or knotting of this cord is liable to cause one or more of these conductors to break, and frequent ill treatment will result in the rupture of the cord as a whole. The same applies to the connecting plugs. Here, again, any jerking from the connections puts a strain on the cord and quickly wears it out. When not in use, the cord should be carefully coiled.

art consists in the addition of restraint and flawlessness to beauty. The essential element of the romantic spirit is curiosity joined to a love of beauty. Romantic poets are often at the mercy of their inspiration; classic poets are mostly the masters of their inspiration. Classic literature embodies the repose of the world; romantic literature the restlessness of the world.

Among the Railroads

By FRANKLIN SNOW

OLLEGE men in railroad employ present a problem of growing interest and importance. The subject has been discussed in addresses at railroad club meetings, in the technical press and in other ways has been emphasized. Between the "hardboiled" operating officials who have worked up from the ranks, from positions such as telegrapher, brakeman, fireman, or clerk, and the officers who are college graduates, but who, in general, also worked their way up, there is a wide divergence of opinion.

Many railroad officers take the view that the college graduate—other than those from engineering schools for whom there is generally a future in railroad service—is unwilling to begin at the bettom expecially when the series at the bettom expecially when the shopmen's strike, which did not slow up the railroad's service appreciably. The new president of the Pennsylvania has staked his reputation as a manage of men upon a theory of direct negotiation with his employees, disregarding their national union officers. It is largely upon the extent of the employees at protection with his employees, disregarding their national union officers. rules sooner or later.

In a sense, these rules are fair in that they assure every man of a "square deal," although they are irksome to ambitious employees. While the viewpoint of railroad officers is biased, in general, by their own college or noncollege status, a growing number admit that the college man can be useful if he is in earnest and 2: willing to perform the same tasks that others are called upon to do. Pennsylvania's New Head

Outstanding in the career of William Wallace Atterbury, recently elected president of the Pennsylvania System, is his effort to establish the basis of direct negotiations between management and employees without interference on the part of the "walking delegates" of labor unions. Disregarding the United States Railroad Labor Board he took before the Supreme Court his contention that the Pennsylvania was entitled to deal with its men in its own way and was upheld. president of the Pennsylvania System.

n its own way and was upheld. The question which General Atterbury has brought up is one of the broadest in the field of industrial re-lations. The customary basis of pro-cedure in discussions of wages and working conditions is for the railroads and the representatives of the em-ployees (usually national officers of and the representatives of the em-ployees (usually national officers of unions) to appear before the Labor Board and argue the case. The board makes its decision and, in general, its decisions are respected, although the law does not give it the final power of on the Pennsylvania, General Atterbury has devised a plan whereby disputes are laid before joint bodies of officials and employees. The latter are elected by their fellow workers in secret ballot and the local union chairmen could be elected if the men so desired. These devices the latter has been been been seen that the secret ballot and the secret ballot has been seen that the secret ballot and the s desired. There are successively higher boards before which disputed decisions of lower "courts" may be brought, each board being divided equally between whom there is generally a future in railroad service—is unwilling to begin at the bottom, especially when placed beside those differing in education, interests, and years of railroad service. Others aver that the cellege man will work diligently, provicing there is a reasonable certainty of promotion when ability has been shown.

On this latter point the situation rests. Certain rules of seniority exist in railroad service which have been made effective at the insistence of the unions. Presumably the men want them continued. The college man, who feels that his superior education should mark him for early promotion, generally encounters the seniority rules sooner or later.

In a sense, these rules are fair in it is stated by a railroad executive. "for the same reason that vessels use

"for the same reason that vessels use space rather than weight as a basis for their tonnage charges."

While average freight earnings of the railways are 1 cent a ton mile, many commodities pay more than this, while others, such as coal, lumber, brick, sand and gravel, constituting a large proportion of the total tonnage moved, pay less. In the case of light commodities, he points out that the proportion of fare in the shape of the weight of the car is greater in the case of the light commodity than the heavy one—a factor which is taken into account in determining the amount of the rate to be charged on various commodities.

Sleeping Car Business

The International Sleeping Car Company, operating pars in 40 countries in Europe, carried 6,000,000 passengers in its 1800 cars last year. The Pullin its 1800 cars last year. The Pullman Company in the United States carried 35,000,000 passengers in its 8000 cars, the average number of passengers a car a year being about 3300 for the International against 4400 for the Fullman.

The Railway Review states that the International Company was incorporated in Belgium, financed in England and its employees speak French. The longest run now is from Amsterdam to Constantinople.

STOCK MARKET TRADING GOES AT FAST PACE

Motors Again Take Lead in Vigorous Upward Movement

MEW YORK, Oct. 1 (P) - Stock rices opened strong, broke sharply inder an avalanche of seiling orders and midday, and then started forward again under the leadership of standard industrials.

he standard industrials.

The break, which followed the narking up of the call money reiewal rate, was inspired by bear tradrs, who sold stocks freely on the heory that the rapidity of the recent rance had left the market in a akened technical position and that out page" markets ordinarily rked the culmination, at least tem-motor and equipment issues, and ew selected specialties.

ash Motors soared 22 points and S. Cast Iron Pipe 13, but the latter ke more than 6 points from its ly high in the selling wave which pet over-the market at noon. Kin& Co. collapsed 9 points, and a mber of other recent speculative orites sold off 1 to 4 points.

favorites sold off 1 to 4 points.

The lowering of the call money rate to 5 per cent and a revival of activity and strength in U. S. Steel common, which crossed 128 to a new high on the movement, steadled the list and eventually induced sufficient fresh buying to start the course of prices unward again.

Foreign exchanges failed to make any appreciable response to the Franco-German Rhine agreement. French francs sagged a few points to 4.43 cents, placing them 12 points below the Belgian rate, but the firmness of Italian lire around 4 cents lent color to the belief that Government support had temporarily pegged them around that figure. Demand sterling ruled firm at $4.83\%, apparently disregarding reports of additional gold shipments.

Extensive Realizing

Heavy accumulation of Southern Railway, which ross 2% to 110½, a new high record for all time, gupple-mented the pace set by U.S. Steel and General Motors, which touched 125%

eneral Motors, which touched and 123, respectively.

New points of strength developed requently despite some extensive religing, which was most pronounci in tadio. Equipments were bought in found amounts, Baldwin rising 3%, and American Locomotive 4 points, Kinney moved up points and Chrysler, Mathison Allau, F. H. Shattuck, Childs, Yellow Truck, Allis Chalmers, Childs, Yellow Truck, Allis Chalmers, Body 3½@4½. Childs, Yellow Truck, Allis Chalmers, and Fisher Body 3½ @4½.
Call money renewed at 5½ per cent.

Bond Movement Narrow Bond prices continued to drift with-in comparatively narrow limits in to-lay's trading, although buying inter-est was revived in several forcesn is-uses and some of the domestic corpo-ation bonds.

The most striking price change in the early dealings was in Rogers Brown Iron Company 7s, which rose 7 points on reports that a readjustment of the company's affairs was oeing considered.

Oil and packing companies' bonds were in demand, but Dodge 6s, Warner Sugar 7s and American Ice 7s lost ground. Liberty bonds were easy, new low prices for the year being estab-lished by the 3½s and third 4¼s...

to $1 Lower-Cattle Market Also Declines CHICAGO, Oct. 16 (Special)-A CHICAGO, Oct. 16 (Special)—A downward revision of prices engulfed practically all classes and grades of live stock at Chicago during the week according to a review of the trade released by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, United States Department of Agriculture. Cattle values were adversely affected by the largest supply of western grassers of the season, running in conjunction with heavy marketings of grassy and short-fed natives. In the hog trade it was a case of

In the hog trade it was a case of further seasonal adjustments to lower levels, while sharp price breaks in fat lamb values reflected depressed conditions in the dressed lamb markets east which had reached price levels such as to effect a material curtailment in consumer demand. Choice, long fed steers excepted, fat steer values were mostly 2 cents lower for the week, with numerous sales of warmed up and short fed kinds.

Much of the butcher cow stuff showed 35 to 40 cents decline. Veal calves lost $1 or more, with recessions in dressed yeal values the most potent factor in the decline.

Prices Generally Lower

In the swine trade Thursday's closing prices varied all the way from 25 cents lower on pigs to; $1 lower than a week earlier on packing sows and heavy butchers, while the slump on fat lambs figured 75 cents to $1, with natives frequently off more, considering severe sorting.

Virtually the only cattle holding the previous week's closing levels were comparatively long fed choice kinds which this week more than at any previous time this season might properly be regarded in the specialty class, quality of the rank and file of the offering having been decidedly plain. Best steers with weight clung tenaciously to a $16 top, but out of Chicago's liberal receipts which totaled nearly 75,000 for four days, the number of loads passing $15 could probably be counted on the fingers of one's hands.

Demand was most active for the weightier kinds with breeding quality and finish, and the closing tone was strong on such. A number of strictly good to choice strongweight bullocks sold at $14.25@14.50, and a few of the best yearlings available reached $15.25@815.35; but very few yearlings showed high finish and sales of little cattle above $13 were externely rare.

Finished Seers Higher

Finished Seers Higher
In the secreity of highly finished steers, with weight, some comparatively short-fed heavy kinds sold in spots to excellent advantage, as indicated by the sale of 1260 pounds steers at $14.7 which had left Chicago only 89 days previous at a cost to the feeder of $10.50. Acres of warmed up and short-fed natives cleared from $9 to $12.50, and most western grassers from $7.50 to $9, Best heavy Montana grassers reaching a top of $11.25.

cleared from $9 to $12.50, and most twestern grazsers from $7.50 to 59, Best heavy Montana grazsers reaching a top of $11.25.

Barring the sale of a limited number of 90 to 100-pound pigs at the price, the $12 hogs disappeared from trade transactions. With country demand for feeder pigs broad and the feed and hog market situation such as to encourage producers in the holding of shotes for further feeding, light pigs became very scarce and a scramble resulted for the few available. The top on pigs above pig weights was $11.95, paid for light lights.

After scoring a $16 top late last week, best fat range lambs had slumped to a $15.40 limit by Thursday. Peeding lambs retained recent high prices in the face of the slump in the fat lamb market, emphasizing the broadness of demand for feeding lambs, supply having been fairly liberal. This resulted in a $15.90 market for choice feeding lambs at a period when the finished product had difficulty bringing within 50 cents of that figure. Sheep were scarce and retained last week's prices.

STEEL CONCERN TO MOVE MILLS

Cromwell Plant Transfer to Kansas City Is Now Planned

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 16 (Spe cial)—Kansas City's growth as a steel center has been accentuated through purchase by the newly organized Kan-center has been accentuated through purchase by the newly organized Kansas City Steel Corporation of the Cromwell Steel Mills, near Cleveland, O. The Cromwell mills are to be moved to this city, where they will occupy a 30-acre tract in a larger tract of 500 in the Blue Valley manufacturing district.

The Cromwell mills, which in recent years have been operated under supervision, of a creditors' committee, have an appraised valuation of $3,000,000. Purchase of the mills was negotiated by J. W. Dana, local lawyer and formerly identified with the Kansas City Gas Company. Associated with Mr. Dana are several men formerly connected with the United States Steel Corporation, the Bethichem Steel Corporation and other companies.

The present move is the second this year toward increasing the steel industry output of this city. A few menths ago the Kansas City Bolt & Nut Company completed a sheet roller mill here, as an addition to its plant, and laid plans for three additional mills of the same type. These plants will manufacture steel sheets of a larger and heavier type than those turned out elsewhere in the United States.

The Cromwell mills to be relocated iron market; accessibility to the mines of Missouri and Arkansas; a growing market for steel products in this ter-ritory; an abundance of oil for heat and a favorable freight rate situation, are influences which have brought the new steel plants here. The mill now to be moved here will employ 400 to 1000 men.

The Baltimore & Ohio has bought $5,000 tons of rails, 45,000 tons going to United States Steel, 25,000 to Beth-lehem and 5000 to Inland Steel. The Fennsylvania Railroad is expected to place a definite inquiry for 200,000 tons. The New York Central's in-quiry for about 175,000 tons is still bending.

CHICAGO CLOTH MART REVEALS SIGNS OF BOOM

Colder Weather Causes Big Demand for Winter Goods -Silk Leads Textiles

CHICAGO, Oct. 16 (Special) — Cool veather and an early snowfall generally over the middle west has boomed vinter merchandise in all of the vholesale and jobbing houses of this wholesale and jobbing houses of this market.

Blankets for spot delivery, comforters selling faster than the mills can turn them out, and immediate delivery asked for wool hose, heavy undergarments, and knitted outerwear, show the trend of greater retail activity on seasonable merchandise.

Business has jumped up considerably the last two weeks, and the activity in the cotton market has been reflected in the increased sale of domestics. Merchants do not care to take a chance of running short, and finding all mills soid up, so they continue to order in a conservative manner.

Sheets and pillow cases have had the greatest call, much of this as anticipated holiday business for fancy hems. Demand for bleached yardwide sheeting and matching grades of pillow tubing show that merchants are realizing the increase there is in home sewing.

Under this general heading comes the demand for spreads in both the damask pattern cottons and in the rayon mixtures, as well as the crinkle types.

rayon mixtures, as well as the crinkle types.

In the cotton goods field the fall husiness is virtually done, and spring lines may be expected to open after Nov. 1, if sensonable winter weather continues and aids a merchant to reduce his heavy stocks and starts him to thinking of future business. Percales, plain English prints, and also small-figured types, challies, and novelty ginghams tell the story in this section, with the importance of rayon fabrics going stronger all the time.

Woolens are awaiting colder weather for re-order business to really begin. The continued pleasant weather did not aid merchants to dispose of stocks delivered in late August and early September.

The silk business continues to be an outstanding textile item. Satin-faced crepes comprise about 50 per cent of the total business. Forty per cent is divided about over creps-de-chines, flat crepes and charmeuse, while the remaining 10 per cent is scattered.

In velvets, favor is, extended toward the brocades and chenflies on sheer volle or georgette grounds, and in many instances this yardage sale is so, large as to be recognized as a mass demand. Chiffon velvets, a little late in getting a start, have taken immense strides toward popularity, and color plays no small part in this.

While the wide widths in both silks and velvets are discussed as the most important season's trend. namy merchants report to the wholesale houses that women are still greatly interested in the narrow widths, 36- and 40-inches, and add that for a mass sale of wide fabrics it is going to be a process of education. Many merchants are planning to hold big spring campaigns to do this.

HIGHER PRICES FOR AMERICAN WOOLEN STOCK

Common Rises 4 Points on Realization That Depression Is Over

The sudden revival of market interest in the common shares of American Woolen Company which on Thursday rose to 44%, the highest level since the latter part of last March, apparently represents a gradually widening speculative appreciation that the company is well round the corner of depression and is in first-class financial condition. This, rather than a sudden or radical change in the company's affairs, is the explanation of the rise.

The American Woolen system is at present operating at around 75 per cent capacity but in another month or so as the natural result of repeat orders and the women's wear business only recently booked, it should be functioning at close to 85 per cent full. That will represent an activity spelling moderate earning power—nothing unusual, of course, but genuine blackink figures.

Though estimates at this time are ing moderate earning power nothing unusual, of course, but genuine blackink figures.

Though estimates at this time are bound to be inexact, the results for the year are now sufficiently well known to give the assurance that the 7 per cent dividend on the $50,000,000 preferred issue will be comfortably covered after all charges. There will, therefore, be some slight balance for the common stock, but how much cannot possibly be hazarded.

The important phase of this year's developments, however, is that business is coming back—that the wool markets are steadier and there is some evidence at least of a return in style to worsteds, which have for years been the backbone of the company's production.

It is precedent, moreover, that at the next goods opening after that which shows a change for the better or change in style, the trend for the better is much more emphatic. Therefore the January openings may easily show further improvement.

In spite of increased operations as compared with a year ago, American Woolen is in stronger financial, shape—small bank borrowings and higher ratio of quick assets to liabilities.

The financial strength of the company is a factor, that on account of last year's debacle, seems to have been overlooked in view of the preferred stock continuing to yield almost 8 per cent.

stock continuing to year per cent.

The company's ratio of quick assets to lisblities was 3.7 to 1—$86,000,000. The net quick asset value per share of preferred is $125—while in plant there is another $100 of value, a total asset value of $225, contrasted with a market price of $89.

Common Stock, par $100, (authorized $10,000,000), Mr. C. D. Caldwell, President, further summarizes his letter as follows:

BUSINESS: Largest producer in United States of commercial coke and one of largest industrial producers of gas for outside sale, selling to Peoples Gas Light & Coke Company a minimum of 23,000,000 cubic feet of gas per day. Company is foremost merchant pig iron operator in Chicago District and also important producer of domestic coke and by-products, including coal tar, ammonia, and light oil. Territorial advantages afford under normal conditions ready market for capacity output. Plants at South Chicago, Ill., efficient and modern, adjoin Calumet River and Calumet Lake, undergoing development as principal harbor on Lake Michigan.

PURPOSE OF ISSUE: To effect substantial saving in interest charges by refunding entire existing funded debt, chiefly bearing 8% and 6% interest.

SECURITY: First Mortgage (upon retirement of $80,000 bonds for which funds will be deposited with Trustee) on all real estate, plants, and equipment now owned or hereafter acquired, except property acquired subject to existing or purchase money obligations, against which no First Mortgage Bonds may be issued until such prior liens are retired. Mortgaged properties, carried at $11,525,979, have been appraised independently at a sound value of over $13,700,000.

Total net tangible assets upon completion of this financing, $16,455,991, equal 3.3 times these $5,000,000 Series A Bonds, including fixed properties at conservative book values. Assuming issuance of $1,000,000 additional Series A Bonds against present properties, net assets would be approximately 2.9 since $6,000,000. mately 2.9 times $6,000,000 Series A Bonds then outstanding. Company is in strong financial condition with current assets nearly 3.4 times current liabilities.

EARNINGS: Indicated net profit, calendar year 1925 before Federal Taxes, over $1,375,000 or 5 times maximum interest requirement on these $5,000,000 Series A Bonds and more than 4 times maximum requirement were $6,000,000 Series A Bonds outstanding (including $1,000,000 additional issuable against present property and earnings).

For 10 years to Deccember 31, 1925 (3 months estimated) such net profit has averaged over 3 times, and for 4 years similarly stated has averaged over 2.3 times this maximum requirement on $6,000,000 Bonds. Current carnings are beginning to reflect benefit of operating economies from recent substantial

Most of these potters, with proportionately few exceptions, are not professionals but amateurs, proud of their tradi-tion, who continue to practice this

It is therefore easy to understand whence they have kept their unique character, being, as far as style is concerned, reminiscent of early German decoration the resemblance is rather closer to the simple majolica wares much more to the stage of the West-of Italy than to any more northern ern world than a realistic Japanese specimens. These similarities are mentioned rather to give some idea of their nature, for in reality they are essentially characteristic of the nation which has produced them. The most attractive examples possess that vigorous baroque flavor which is so unforgettable to anyone who knows the beautiful city of Prague. If the Czechoslovakians have some-

The result has been that for centuries the lace patterns made in this way have shown comparatively few innovations from the time that this industry first began to flourish.

For who of your great artists but must make a brag of the "Waldstein," the "Appassionata," or opus 111? The composer does not, indeed, foreshadow all the accomplishment of the nineteenth century in the little G major sonata; he but sums up the achievement of the solution of t he but sums up the achievement of the latter half of the eighteenth. And yet, he makes as full a confession of himself here as he does in any of sung and acted by Florence Russell his path-breaking works. Granted that the logic is less subtle, the senti-ment less profound than in sonatas that bear a higher number, the humor, nevertheless, is about the most sparkling and the most free of sarcastic implication of anything, whether in the early or the late style. Mr. Friskin is one of those players who make Beethoven seem a master of the rhetoric of the piano, instead of a mere primitive and a forerunner of Chopin.

Mme. Miura gave her study of the title rôle in "Madam Butterfly," appearing with the San Carlo Opera Company at the Century Theater last evening. She kept the house re-markably intent upon her impersonation, which for energy, alertness and charm is scarcely ever surpassed. With small voice, she sings more meaning into the part than many a soprano who possesses dramatic and lyric tone resources unbounded. An irrepressible cheerfulness resides in the character of Cio-Cio-San, as she can bring out the meanings of Ocpottery. This similarity applies can bring out the meanings of Oclargely to their form; in color and cidental romance without resorting to tears and melancholy. She gives much more to the stage of the West-

POLISH CHURCH GETS FULL INDEPENDENCE

Polish Church No Longer Under Moscow Patriarch

WARSAW, Sept. 26 (Special Correspondence)-The members of the Greek Orthodox Church in Poland have been celebrating a great fes-tival. A delegation from the Patri-breh of Constantinople has arrived in order to present the Metropolitan Dionysius with the act acknowledg-ing the independence of the Ortho-fox Church in Poland.

In this way the adherents of the Greek Catholic Church in Poland are no longer dependent on the Patriarch in Moscow, but have at-tained full rights of autonomy and the independent Orthodox Church in Poland has been recognized as such by the churches of that faith

n Bulgaria and Rumania as well as Constantinople, In future the independent Orthodox Church, which takes the sec-ond place in Poland as regards numbers of believers, will be assured of all rights, and will be able to de-velop in an atmosphere of toler-ance under the protection of the Constitution of the Republic.

"Germany approves the Security Pact!" The words flashed under seas or through the air

yesterday carried to the world the greatest promise of reconstruction and peace in Europe since the day of the armistice. By this act Germany resumes her standing in the family of nations, and the League finally enrolls the last of the civilized and progressive nations of Europe in its membership. Russia and Turkey alone remain without the pale in contented isolation along with the United States.

This is a happy termination to a protracted series of conferences and pourparlers which have throughout been notable for the very apparent eagerness of all nations concerned to reach an harmonious finish. To Locarno, a little red-roofed town looking out over the picturesque Lake Maggiore, have come the foremost statesmen of Great Britain, France, Germany and Italy. With the memory of a long series of fruitless conferences still fresh, the world looked with incredulity upon this one. But from the first a new temper was apparent. The conferees for the first time seemed to seek points of agreement rather than matters upon which a sharp divergence of opinion was certain. As a result each day's reports showed progress toward the desired goal.

Whether done with intent or otherwise, this proved shrewd tactics, for it resulted in the rapid formation of an optimistic sentiment at home. Toward the closing days of the conference, press comment was general to the effect that the conferees would not dare to break up and return to their respective states without some agreement, so general was the expectation that at last a substantial step toward European harmony would be taken.

In view of the general apprehension in the United States as to the significance and probable results of General von Hindenburg's election to the Presidency of the German Reich, it is interesting to note that his signature will be affixed to the Locarno pact and that his influence must have been cast upon its side. True, this action does not finally quiet all the issues which distress Germany and keep her at odds with the more western nations of Europe.

The treaties providing for arbitration of such vexed questions as the Polish-German frontier are yet to be perfected. And it may be expected that Germany within the League will be even more insistent upon the revision of the Versailles Treaty than Germany outside the League has been. But if these problems shall be approached in the spirit which has characterized the discussions at Locarno their solution in accordance with reason and harmony may confidently be anticipated. The really great significance of the pact lies in the evidence it furnishes of the willingness of France and Germany to abide in enduring peace. With this spirit thus manifested, the greatest menace to Europe is removed. Though more specific steps remain to be taken, they will doubtless follow now that the will to peace is manifest.

When the record of 1925 in international affairs comes to be made up it will show notable progress toward the reconstruction of Europe, the restoration of international-harmony and the reconstruction of the financial edifice of civilized society. It will show the League of Nations contributing notably to this end with the United States outside. But it will further show that even though outside that organization, the United States has not failed of its duty, nor shirked its part in restoring normal conditions to a war-wracked world.

So far as organized labor in the United States

Organized Labor Looks Ahead

Labor, it has undertaken, as it expresses itself in resolutions adopted at the Atlantic City convention, to protect itself against being subordinated to the increasing introduction of labor-saving machinery and electric power. The protection sought, briefly, lies in the assurance of a proportionate increase in wages to insure an equalization of the purchasing power of the wage earner's dollar, and a decrease of working hours. The essence of the resolutions which, according to William Green, president of the organization, mark the beginning of a new era for American Labor, is contained in the following paragraph:

Social inequality, industrial instability and injustice must increase unless the workers' real wages—the pur-chasing power of their wages—coupled with a continuing reduction in the number of hours making up the working day, are progressed in proportion to man's increasing power of production.

It is not to be wondered at, therefore, that the delegates who finally voted unanimously for the adoption of this pronouncement hesitated to take the step which finally committed them to it. By their declaration, it must be assumed, the representatives of those wage earners affiliated with the American Federation of Labor seek in advance to claim for the workers for whom they no doubt speak with authority, every economic benefit which is to be gained by the development of super-power applied to production and by the greater development and use of labor-saving machinery. This policy, if organized labor finds it possible to enforce it, would make impossible any material reduction in production and distribution costs, thus depriving capital invested in manufacturing enterprises, as well as the consumers, representing the great mass of taxpayers, of a share of the benefits which should belong to it or to them. There is no mistaking the language used. It is declared that the purchasing power of the wages of labor, coupled with a continuing reduction of the hours constituting the working day, must progress in proportion to the increasing power of production. An unselfish and unbiased view of the matter should convince the unprejudiced student that the benefits which are being derived, and the far greater benefits which in the future will be derived from more efficient and more economical production through the use of hydroelectric power and perfected labor-saving machinery, have not been bestowed or assured by those who now insist upon the privilege of enjoying the lion's share of them. The great superpower projects which have been developed have been financed largely by the public, the people, through their state or national governments. Those which may be developed in the near future may indeed demand the co-operative effort of neighboring friendly nations. Are these great structures being built only to assure to organized labor a higher wage and a shorter American labor, organized and unorganized, is now sharing quite liberally the fruits of industry and production. The worker, it may be agreed, has benefited through organization. Whether the militant tactics sometimes resorted to in an effort to enforce the demands for higher and ever higher wages and better working conditions have gained for him more than could have been otherwise realized is still a question. It is significant, however, that a resort to force is not as frequent today as formerly. There is apparent, happily, a willingness and a readiness to concede the reasonable demands of workers. But this fairness on the part of those who eventually must pay, directly or indirectly, the higher wages demanded by those who work with their hands, must not be abused. In the equalization of obligations, as which should be the guide.

Atlanta, Ga., a cottonmill employee. It was entitled, "When Whisky Went Out Morals of Cotton Mill Villages Went Higher." And it constituted as strong an indorsement of prohibition as anyone could wish for. "There has been a gradual decrease in the use of alcoholic beverages and a marked increase in general welfare among southern cotton-mill employees since the enactment of the Eighteenth Constitutional Amendment," the writer started off bluntly by stating.

Mr. Clarke evidently writes of conditions with which he is perfectly familiar, as the whole tone of the article is one of plain statement of fact devoid entirely of theoretical considerations. The old-time drunkard, he gives assurance, has about faded out of the picture, and no one seems to replace him. "That is a sure sign of advancement," he comments, adding that the dry law closed the rum shop, and that so far as the cotton mill conditions in the south are concerned, things are in better shape. Among the improvements which this latter generalization includes is the fact that as a result of the decrease in liquor drinking. 'morals went higher than we dared dream they

When one recalls the many specious arguments put forward by those who would have the people of America and the world believe that prohibition not only is not being enforced, but is actually resulting in an aggravated condition of immorality, such a picture of condi-tions carries great weight. A cotton mill em-ployee, living in the midst of the environment he describes, is surely more trustworthy as an authority than some man writing maybe many hundreds of miles away. "With our population increasing faster than ever," says Mr. Clarke, "open drink shops would set the south back in morality and do the world at large an irreparable injustice by cutting down efficiency from the present high standard." And then he adds the forecast, which seems abundantly justified by his facts, that in ten years' time, if the regularly constituted authorities will do their duty in other districts, the cotton manufacturing centers in the south will have settled the question of drink most satisfactorily-not by force, but through education in the cotton manufacturing sections. It is true that certain classes in the United States are successfully defying the prohibition law. It is also true that many who do not wish to see improvements in the general morale of the country are deliberately refusing to acknowledge benefits which are really obvious. But it is still more true that there are countless thousands who have been benefited by the prohibition movement in the United States. And it is equally true that the eyes of a large part of the world are upon the United States watching to see it finally and completely victorious in this great moral reform which it has instituted.

It would seem that there should be no great difficulty, in a matter where all the evidence is obtainable by anyone who makes an honest effort to ascertain the facts, to arrive at a fairly satisfactory conclusion. In the attempt to determine the reasonableness of rates imposed by owners and landlords in the larger cities of the United States, for instance, it should not be difficult, physical conditions being observable, to reach a just judgment. In New York, at the moment, the necessity of continuing public regulation of apartment and tenement rental charges is being discussed. Real estate owners insist that there is no longer any need of such supervision. The law, enacted almost five years ago, will expire by limitation on Feb. 15, 1926. Landlords claim that the housing crisis has passed and that the law should not be re-enacted.

Has the Housing Crisis Passed?

While it appears to be the fact that in New York, and in some other large cities, the tendency is to reduce the rental charges on the higher priced apartments, perhaps because of an oversupply of such houses, there still exists a shortage in the supply of houses or tenements obtainable at prices which the average working man and wage earner is able to pay. A survey made by the New York Commission on Housing, filed in March last, described housing conditions as growing steadily worse instead of better. Representatives of the rent payers insist that this emergency still exists, and that no material change could have taken place in the few months which have passed since the investigation was conducted.

But it appears to the casual observer that whatever may be claimed in support of the assertion that there has been a general and farreaching reduction in rentals, the facts do not bear out the claim. Statistics compiled by federal investigators show the levels to be about as high as at any period since 1917. There are instances in which rates on the more expensive apartments have been shaded slightly, but the average rent payer has not benefited by this. High prices have driven many who might afford the more expensive apartments into cheaper and smaller homes.

The discussion in New York turns, quite naturally, upon the question of the reasonableness or the necessity of continuing some form of public regulation of rents. That same question is one which affects, in some degree at least, the people of every large community. It has been consistently argued that the charges levied upon the use of apartment house and tenement property dedicated to public occupancy may as properly be regulated by com-missions or boards as are the charges levied by the proprietors of street railway, telephone, telegraph, water, electric light and power and other utilities compelled to submit to established supervisory and regulatory control.

Those owners and landlords who seek to prevent this regulation, as those in New York are now endeavoring to do, logically should make it appear that the rates imposed are, in fact, fixed by the law of supply and demand. The burden of proof should be placed upon them, it would seem, especially in a case where it is not agreed that normal conditions exist. It is unjust to demand that tenants shall indeterminately be compelled to pay rates which will show a profit upon the fictitious values placed upon properties which have been made the plaything of avaricious speculators who have plastered them with second, third, and fourth mortgages upon which usurious interest charges have been pledged. There must come, sooner or later, a readjustment of basic values. Losses must eventually be written off. It seems reasonable to insist that the wage earners should not forever be compelled to carry a burden which circumstance has compelled them to bear during the years of inflation, and which they cannot much longer endure.

It is a subject fraught with all kinds of possibilities for development which George Bernard Shaw has chosen, for the series of six lectures to be given under the auspices of the Fa-bian Society between Oct. 22 and Nov. 26 at Kingsway Hall, London. For he has enigmatically named it "The Impossiof Freedom' bilities of Freedom," and no one who has read his productions will be guilty of believing that he will do anything but treat it in a way worthy

"The Im-

But whether or no, the fact remains that a problem of the future, to which it is known that Mr. Shaw has given profound thought, will be the disposal of the leisure time that is bound to become more and more a feature of civilized life as the years roll by. "What will happen," he has asked, "when all our days except the whole holidays are half-holidays?" Of course the answer which must be forthcoming will be found in the arousing of the ambitions of the masses to an intensive culture of their higher selves. But until this comes to pass, it seems likely that there may be a time when, as he has warned, the old proverb, "Satan finds some mischief still for idle hands to do," will be forcibly brought before the human thought as something demanding serious attention.

As a matter of fact, there are no "impossibilities" of freedom. Through confusing "license with "liberty," such a condition can easily be envisioned. But freedom itself, that normal state of man in which he is a law unto himself, in the right sense of that phrase, involves no impossibilities. Freedom includes all the possibilities of man's real nature. It carries with it both the sense of abundance of opportunity for good and the affluence of that dominion which rightly belongs to man. It will open the door to the finest and best in civilization, when understood and applied, and it represents an El Dorado by no means beyond the reach of humanity.

Editorial Notes

Those were brave words which Canon Scott of Quebec, chaplain-in-chief of the Canadian forces in France during the World War, uttered at the Canadian Club of Boston the other night, when he urged that so long as the American and the British flags stand united, the world is safe. And yet he was fully justified in his further statement that "it is important that we Canadians keep our own individuality as a nation, for it is in that way that our union with our sister empire, the United States, will be most strongly cemented." Unity, the world is finding out, does not mean the obliteration of individuality. The very term, "United States," should serve to point this conclusion. When the world is also "united" in bonds of fellowship and kindly feeling, there will be a sense of individuality in evidence on every hand beyond anything that has been known before.

That honesty is the best policy is a truism which has been worn so nearly threadbare in the past that many seem to believe that it no longer represents a really practical truth. Hence when one finds nationally known business men speaking at an annual convention of advertising clubs, as was the case the other day in Springfield, Mass., and taking as their keynote, "Honesty in advertising, whether in retail or wholesale business, its value to individuals and communities, and its absolute necessity in business life," one smiles and welcomes the fact. Who says that the moral tone of American business today is not higher than it was a few years ago?

An American Trail of the Ages

The progress of civilization, it has been observed, is the progress of transportation. One wishing to study the civilizing progress of transport in the United States could have done no better, during the past summer, than to visit a strip of buffalo grass in southern Wyoming. From this mid-country vantage point, by a combination of circumstances, a man could grasp three significant chapters at once—could glimpse the heart of three spectacular epochs of transportation.

First, he was shown his country emerging, two generations back, from that period in which intelligence moved across the continent at the pace of an ox. Then, swept to the other extreme, he was shown the wings on which the next generation will move. After that, if he had the mental strength to avoid accepting the contemporaneous as the commonplace, there was a third transportation show that could shell a white light on his country's mightiness in the present hour.

America at Yesterday, at Tomorrow and at Today—verlly, it was grand drama for anybody with a capacity for three such acts and a will to think them through.

We left the train at old-new Cheyenne. In Cheyenne a merchant devotes one chow window to the finest saddles that can be turned out of leather, and his other window to the clothes that Broadway wears. In Cheyenne a man may go about whiskered without at-tracting attention, while, on the other hand, they have a lady for Governor.

Flat streets flowed off toward the first rolling hills.

Flat streets flowed off toward the first rolling hills. At a crossing we waited to let a ranchman in sombrero and overalls gallop past. He rested a straight back comfortably against the high cantle. His boots were thrust through the stirrups to the heels. He rocked along on a palomina range horse that would maintain the gait until nightfall unless bidden to break it by a lifting of the rein. It was a ground-gaining gallop, determined but not weavying, with a speed reserve behind it that would be let out whenever asked for.

The cowman was a figure that might vanish on the first day that there was no longer a profit in herds. But his mount was a factor stretching across the generations. Raised to importance by a region whose distances made

It was a horse we had come to see. It was an earlier It was an earlier horse one having something of the Trojan glamour, but exceeding the wooden horse of Troy as much in rightful fame as in speed. It was the pony of the Pony Express. Just over the first range of hills, in a space where the ankle-high buffalo griss seeded in loneliness for the buffalo that came no more, Julesburg was found.

Not Colorado's ambitious Julesburg of today, but a reconceived Julesburg of 1860. It was a supply depot on the overland trail to golden California and Acadian 0. 2001. It was a gathering place for discontented gentlemen who must let off a gun to fetch a challenge that would provoke them to let off a gun. And, more to our point, it was a remount station for those first hugiling carriers of the mail.

Before the motion picture camera we saw early history and early drama live again in an atmosphere clouded by popping pistols, stampeding buffaloes and centaur's pounding feet. Even as a play it made the heart leap. But Julesburg could not hold one's mind. Thought swung back and forth, forth and back with the fitting riders who were basting into a single piece the far edges of a country and all that lay between.

They were lone individuals, each of whom wrought a magnificent heroism while a continent flowed beneath his horse's feet. Out of Julesburg and on through the Rockies sped the rider, beeding neither beast nor Indian Rockies sped the rider, heeding neither beast nor Indian nor storm. Galloping, galloping, galloping he saw the sun sinking behind his glowing far destination. Galloping, galloping, galloping he felt over his shoulder the rising sun of another day.

At bedtime we whisked over to Cheyenne's other edge to watch the night six mailedren out of the sky. Churn-to watch the night air mail-drop out of the sky. Churning black clouds shut off every star except those at the horizon. Hooded searchlights swung their white bolts athwart a field of twisted buffalo grass. These were guide posts and landing lights for a brave young man from San Francisco who was thundering along somewhere in those tumb. 'ng clouds.

Another young man, agile in his leather clothes, had ordered a plane with tremendous wings from the hangar and had tuned it until the grass behind his rudder ripped out of the clutching ground. "I've got to pick up twenty minutes between here and Chicago," he confided to us. "An observer in Utah has radioed that Sim is seventeen minutes behind schedule, and he'll lose three minutes more in finding our field and boring down to it through more in finding our field and boring down to it through that fermenting yeast up there."

Whether Sim did lose that precious three minutes more may never be proven by us. What we heard was a sudden skyward roaring; what we saw were sudden red and green lights as of a ship. An unearthly, unoutlined ship it was, at once audible and visible when it burst out of that upside-down ocean of cloud. One wild, spiraling plunge, one wild, diminishing shriek, and the mail plane from California bumped and bounced and stopped beside us, within fifty feet of its waiting and throbbing successor.

Out of the fuselage crawled a weary creature in leather. Into the fuselage dived two husky helpers and sent mail sacks flying through the air along a line of men's hands until they rested snug in the fuselage of the other ship. A salute from the searchlights, the triumphant scream of an unthrottled motor, a streak of white down the field, more port and starboard lights moving against dark clouds, and it was reasonably certain that the mail from Market Street would spin over State Street at breakfast-time and flutter into Broadway at noon.

These filer: of the night linked up curiously with those riders of the day. With the broad sky to choose a road from, the filers crossed the continent squarely above the ancient peny path. And even back when the pony came, it appears, this path was a beaten track. It was a heritage road. Back of the white man, back of the red man, elk and bison and wild goose fared east to west and west to east by this highroad that instinct told them was their way.

Migrating tribe, Covered Wagon, Pony Express, Overland Limited, Air Mail, each in turn tried other routes and each returned to the Trail of the Ages in tribute to the instinct of the beast.

and each returned to the Trail of the Ages in tribute to the instinct of the beast.

Most dazzling of all those who had swept down that mellowing corridor was this new traveler by the air. As often as old Earth turned he was whispering to Atlantic and Pacific that they were but a single day apart. Trailing every sun, his engine flaunted a gossamer ribbon above a people whom geography can never again divide. It was a kind of rainbow, this ribbon, betokening the unitedness of the United States.

We boarded the Los Angeles Limited to roll along for a couple of days and think it all out. Profound reflection was difficult, so diverting were, the travelers apread through the solid Pullmans of the train. Here were easterners going west to play; here were westerners going home to work; scores of fine folk bound for one or another of a score of national parks; a satisfied delegation of Chinese diplomatists going back to their reward in Peking; a party of rosy-cheeked Dutchmen going back, after a holiday in Holland, to their fruitful planting in the Javanese mud.

We passed other editions of the Limited bound eastward with passengers as important in many quarters, no doubt, as our own. At least they had the look of it in that lightning instant of passing when an eye can see and guess so much.

that lightning and guess so much.

And there were also many, many trains of window-less cars—tight box cars which in spite of their tight-ness gave, now and again, a little clue on the outside that they carried goods originating in many states and in far corners of the globe. The old trail seemed to

It was as a mighty river, bearing on its epic boson the incredible evidences of how men will plant and grind and think and aspire to meet the requirements of other planting, grinding, thinking, aspiring men.

It was, verily, a great summer to stand on one's toes in old-new Cheyenne and follow the meaningful drama of transportation. It was superb to watch the rider gallop off into a stormswept fastness with the bag he guarded with his life. It was thrilling to watch the flier tumble out of and climb back into the night cloud with your special delivery letter and mine. But it was somehow best of all, in a grateful moment of realization, to watch the workaday Union Pacific, its method hiding the miracle of it all, moving masses of human beings and mountains of goods to the places where they were needed and must go. A soulless corporation was keeping the faith. It was fulfilling an obligation which, as cus-todian of the Trail of the Ages, it appeared to accept

The World's Great Capitals: The Week in London

All roads in England this week lead to the Olympia Motor Show. Huge crowds are attending, and the orders booked have exceeded the hopes of the most sanguine manufacturers. A feature has been the heavy buying of the British dominions and other export orders. The great prosperity of the motor industry has had an excel-lent effect on the general business feeling. It is felt, with so much buying power in evidence, that the country must be on the eve of a return to better industrial conditions

Although there have been several books written about the Bank of England, the committee of the library of the bank recently pointed out to the governor that no one has ever tried to tell the really human side of the bank during its 230 years of continuous existence. The governor has indorsed the view of the committee, and it is now believed that such a work would receive a wide audience among readers all over the world. The fact that the historic structure used by the bank is now being that the historic structure used by the bank is now being entirely rebuilt makes this a suitable time for such a book to be issued. W. M. Acres, who is connected with the bank and has written extensively on London, has been intrusted with the task of showing the world that the "Old Lady of Threadneedle Street" has a genuinely human as well as cold and businesslike side.

Artistry and craftsmanship were combined in the prosaic trade of groceryman at the national food exhibition in Agricultural Hall. Rules for the Cheshire cheese-judging competition required each contestant to "Iron each cheese once"; that didn't mean to take out the wrinkles but merely to bore it with an iron sampling the wrinkles but mercely to nore it with an iron sampling auger for the purpose of tasting it. Also, the cheese was required to have the proper color and texture, for these counted for twenty out of a possible forty points in the aim for perfection. The Wiltshire bacon purveyors showed such finesse that each slice seemed almost to have been shaved from the strip by a safety razor. And the window dressing! A certain village north of London is very proud of its brass band, and the local squire exerts himself to keep it at a high pitch of efficiency. Feeling recently that the introduction of new talent might ringer it up a bit, he inserted an advertisement in the local paper. Would-be to an unheard-of number answered the admusicians to an unnear of number answered the au-vertisement and the squire was greatly surprised, not having expected that the entire county contained so many. But the mystery was solved when it was found that more than 90 per cent of the applicants were anxious to have than 90 per cent of the a lash at the big drum.

An interesting development in modern cabling was recently demonstrated by the head office in London of the Western Union Telegraph and Cable Company to a large group of newspaper men, bankers, and others interested in rapid communication. The occasion was the formal opening of direct cable communication between London and San Francisco, nearly 7000 miles, without relay or break of any kind. The process is almost entirely automatic and is so well safeguarded that the possibility of error is practically eliminated. Each of the guests at the demonstration was invited to send a message to some individual known to be present at a similar demonstration at the San Francisco end of the line. The replies were received just as fast as it was possible for them to be written by the senders. "Hearty greetings to you upon this evidence of the lessening of time and space between m and all people," responded the San Francisco bureau of The Christian Science Monitor to the salutation from the London Bureau. The demonstration was merely a part of the great progress which has characterized cabling improvements during the past five years and shows graphically why cable companies continue to lay expensive cables in spite of the growth and development of wireless communication.

The problem of delivering mail at way stations from several British inventors and it is felt certain that by the time air mail delivery comes into general operation the problem will be solved. It is planned to have the post office acquire open spaces in the towns where intermediate deliveries are to be made for use as receiving stations. It is expected that the planes will fly at a speed of about 100 miles per hour and at a height of 6000 feet. The mail droppers which are so far considered to have reached a practicable stage, all employ the clockwork arresting system. At the proper place the aviator takes aim at the receiving station through a sort of bomb sight. The mail bag, to which is attached the arresting device and a parachute, drops like a stone, until about thirty feet from the ground, when the parachute automatically opens and allows the mail to be deposited gently on the ground. * * *

There may be parts of the British Isles in which a motorcar is not of much use owing to bad roads or their precipitous nature, but there is one part where it is definitely forbidden. This is on Sark, the smallest inhabited island of the Channel group. As it is only some three and one-half miles long by one and one-half miles wide at its broadest part there is not what may be called a real necessity for a car. But a recently appointed official leng necessed of a motorcer impreculty took it. official, being possessed of a motorcar, innocently took it with him. He was told he would not be allowed to use it, but his daughter nevertheless grove the car from the little harber through the tunnel which forms the only entrance to the interior of the island up to the house in which they were to live. She was fined £2 and warned that a further offense would entail confiscation of the car and a fine of £10. The engine of the car now pro-vides electric light for the owner's home.

Letters to the Editor

"The Mystery of the Pacific"

To the Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR: In a recent issue of the Monitor there was an article, "The Mystery of the Pacific," by Marc T. Greene, which interested me reatly. As a child and during schooldays, I heard my father talk about and discuss all the ancient discoveries in North America. He was especially taken with the discoveries on the southeastern coast—the paved road into the Atlantic, the flora, fauna, etc., and the

"Lost Atlantis" seemed not lost to me! So these Pacific islands and their lore and remainders are fascinating to me. One thing Mr. Greene says in this article, however, does not agree with the Encyclopedia Britannica. In one paragraph he has these words: "Immense stone images and monoliths, weighing tons in some cases, and constructed of a material which neither exists at present ror is ever known to have existed in

The Britannica says, Vol. VIII, p. 830 (Easter Island): "They are formed from a grey trachytic lava found at the east end of the island."

The idea of a lost continent in the Pacific, too, is full of charm and fascinates one with its possibilities. G. J. D. Pratt, Kan
